November 12, 2020

Volume 2, Issue 12

Wendell Berry Speaks, Bioneers Invite & Deborah Madison is on Deck!

Greetings!

Flipping the Table's New Imhoff Archives Series Episode 1

Dan Imhoff interviews writer, poet and farmer Wendell Berry. His thinking and writing have influenced farmers, food movement activists and leaders for 50 years. The topics, themes and challenges they discuss are as salient today as in 2010 when they had this conversation.

Special Opportunity for the ROC Community

The Bioneers 2020 Conference is themed “Beyond the Great Unraveling: Weaving the World Anew.” This year’s conference is going virtual over the first two weekends in December and boasts a very strong and dynamic lineup of speakers and panels focused on food and agriculture issues. Examples include:

- Three Pillars for 21st Century Food Security: Regenerative Agriculture, Local Food and New Farmers
- Leah Penniman - Farming While Black: Uprooting Racism and Seeding Sovereignty
- BIPOC Leaders Share Food Sovereignty Strategies

The Bioneers 2020 Conference also features compelling environmental and social justice panels that the Roots of Change community will find of great interest.

We are grateful that Bioneers is offering the ROC community a 20 percent discount on an already very reasonable price in this difficult year. If anyone has ever considered attending a Bioneers Conference, this is a really good year to check it out! See the super brief and dynamic promo video!

Our Next Episode: My Conversation with Deborah Madison

Cookbook author, vegetable lover, local food advocate and former Buddhist monk, Deborah has just published her memoir, An Onion In My Pocket: My Life With Vegetables. It is receiving great reviews. With a childhood in California’s Central Valley, 20 years of daily Zen meditation, founding of the world-renown Greens restaurant in San Francisco, and a writing career that has so far rendered 15 books, Deborah lives an amazing life. Join me in exploring it with her. (Photo credit: Laurie Smith)

Thank you!
