

New Podcast Episode: A New Vision for the Farm Bill

Greetings!

The Farm Bill is the most important law that most people have never heard of. It is how taxpayers spend $100 billion dollars each year on payments for farm subsidies, conservation and feeding low income families. Today's guest, Dan Imhoff, has spent 15 years studying and writing about transformation of this critical law. In this episode we talk about the difference between the Farm Bill we need and the one we have.

Here is our latest episode featuring a conversation with Dan Imhoff, author of The Farm Bill: A Peoples' Guide.

A New Vision for the Farm Bill with Dan Imhoff, author of The Farm Bill: A Peoples' Guide

The latest and largest federal legislation related to nutrition access, agriculture and rural communities became law in December 2018. It will guide $100 billion in public investment annually for the next five years. The bill met the challenges of the middle of the last century, but no longer serves as much as it harms the nation.

Dan and Michael discuss a new vision for the Farm Bill that would help food and fiber producers and rural communities to capitalize on new opportunities that meet the challenges of the 21st century.
