We Are Launching a New Series!

Greetings!

Today’s Episode With Author and Farmer Dan Imhoff Kicks off the New “Imhoff Archives” Series on Flipping the Table

Pioneers who thought and acted differently from the mainstream launched what we today call the regenerative agriculture or good food movement. As we have described in this document regarding farming systems, the effort to create a different approach to agriculture began in the United Kingdom in the 1930s with Sir Albert Howard and his wife Louise. The 1960s and 70s brought another surge of great minds and practitioners who are the American pioneers. These individuals helped us see how farming and ranching based on holistic thinking, ecological and humane practices will fix many of the economic, social and environmental challenges of our time.

Today, we launch a series dedicated to hearing the voices of those pioneers. The series emerges from the “Farm and Garden Show,” a radio program that ran for over a decade out of Mendocino County in northern California and which was co-hosted by Dan Imhoff, the writer and farmer best known for his books on agriculture and the Farm Bill. Our conversation covers the origins of the show and provides six entertaining stories about compelling interviews Dan held with Wendell Berry, William Allen, Temple Grandin, Gary Nabhan, Michael Pollan and participants from the first Terra Madre event hosted by Slow Food in Turin, Italy in 2004. The Imhoff Archive Series will run monthly through April of 2021.

Our Next Episode: Three Dynamic Women Tackling the Huge Challenge of Meat Processing for Small Local Producers, October 29th
Hear all about the Bay Area Ranchers Coop (BARC) project that aims to give small and mid-size livestock producers a fighting chance in a system dominated by the COVID-tormented industrial meat system.

Thank you!
